The box lunch — 54 years ago.
Even then, people found ways to bring the Morton Salt along.
It was a tradition.

Today, people carry on that tradition with Morton portable, disposable, pre-filled Miniatures and Salters.
That's progress.

When it rains it pours.

Today there is still no cure for arthritis. But there is a new and different kind of help.

Ben-Gay® Penetrating Heat Lotion helps you in a special way that aspirin and other internal medications can't. It bakes your ache . . . right down to your bones.

This smooth white lotion is concentrated. Not thin and watery. Rub it in. It disappears. You'll feel its warmth deep down where you hurt.

New Ben-Gay Penetrating Heat Lotion brings you hours of relief from the minor pains of arthritis and rheumatism. It bakes your ache . . . right down to your bones.

as we see it

■ William Dozier, the Hollywood producer who gave the world Batman and who now is filming The Green Hornet for next season, is not a man who rests on his laurels. He's got Dick Tracy warming up for 1967-68.

Thus while network executives are justifiably worried about running out of feature movies for television, they can take comfort in the knowledge that the future for cartoon characters is extremely bright. Actually, the surface has barely been scratched.

■ Way back in the early days of television, Blondie ran for several seasons, and there was Superman; but aside from those and perhaps one or two others, the field is wide open, from Dondi to Mary Worth, from Happy Hooligan to Pogo.

The question is whether they would be best on television as animated cartoons or as live action, à la Batman. Popeye has been extremely successful as a cartoon on TV, as have the Disney characters and Peanuts. Now heading for syndication as animated cartoons are (we quote the ads):

■ "The Mighty Thor! His real name is Dr. Blake—a serious and dedicated doctor. As Thor—he can cause storms and can fly by swinging his enchanted hammer, letting go and holding on."

"Iron Man! As handsome, debonair Tony Stark, he's the world's greatest inventive genius, owning the world's largest armament factory. Donning his suit of armor, with jet power, he can fly, and with his transistorized gadgets—he's as strong as a tank."

■ Then, of course, lots of shows that started on television wind up as newspaper comics—Dr. Kildare, Ben Casey, Gunsmoke, Perry Mason and others. Somehow television programs lend themselves just as well to newspaper comic strips as the comic strips lend themselves to television.

There's something to think about there.

BETTE DAVIS GOES WEST... WITH A WALLOP

*Pow! Bette Davis lets Amanda Blake have it in a scene for a Gunsmoke episode.*

The story thus far: On a ruse, Matt Dillon (James Arness) has been enticed to the Stone farm to rescue Kitty (Amanda Blake), who has been kidnaped. Etta Stone (Bette Davis) plans a horrible revenge. She and her four sons would hang Matt, with Kitty looking on, to avenge the hanging of the Stone father for murder six years before. Matt had brought him in for trial. As our scene opens, Kitty has tried to escape, and in the ensuing action Etta Stone in fury has killed her own son Jack. Now Bette Davis stands before Amanda Blake for one of the meanest slapping scenes in all TV history.

Pow! right in the kisser (as Jackie Gleason would say), resounds the first slap. Again and again, Bette slaps Amanda, whose head and long red tresses toss with the

As Miss Davis swings, again and again, Amanda's head and red tresses toss under 'impact' of the blows. Complimented Bette: 'Amanda Blake is one of the best.'

Bette approaches Amanda for the big scene. Said Miss Blake: 'At first I was scared to death because I'm in awe of this woman. But it turned out dandy.'

*Still friends. It was the first TV Western for Bette since some Wagon Trains and a Virginian several years ago. She also once did a Perry Mason.*

impact of the blows.

"You and that marshal," Bette yells. "You're killin' my family."

Uncontrollably, she lashes out, now decides that both Matt and Kitty shall die . . . "If it costs all our lives . . . every one. You'll both die on the rope . . . Him first, then you!"

Cut. The two women embrace (below), then laugh and talk (above) about the scene, which is from an upcoming episode of Gunsmoke, "The Jailer," due this September.

Actually, in the accepted Hollywood fight-scene technique, Bette never laid a hand on Amanda, although the sound effects and the violent action made it appear plenty realistic. Said Amanda afterward, "I could feel the wind going by."

Bette Davis commented that she enjoyed doing the scene and the show which, according to TV custom, was completed in six days. She believes it's one of the best organized programs on TV and that much of the credit should go to the production people. The experience reminded Miss Davis of her early days at Warner Brothers, where feature films were often completed in eight days.

"There is something to be said for doing a show quickly," Miss Davis observed, "but I think six days is cutting it just a little bit close."

DARLING, your CLAWS are SHOWING

When the girls let down their hair and let loose their tongues—backstage at 'Girl Talk'

BY MURIEL DAVIDSON

I was sitting backstage at the Girl Talk show, nervously waiting to make my fifth appearance on the controversial discussion program, when I was accosted by a woman who is noted for her sweet and wholesome disposition in her frequent panel-show appearances. Miss Wholesome nodded to one of the other waiting Girl Talk participants and purred, "That dame has had her face lifted so many times that dimple in her chin is really her navel." I was gaily laughing when she narrowed her blue eyes at me and said, "That's a nice dress you're wearing. I have the original." She topped off her merciless backstage performance by sidling up to the show's star, Virginia Graham, and asking, "Miss, where is the ladies' room?"

This is the quality of the conversation you would hear if you were situated beyond the range of cameras and microphones during the tapings of the highly successful daytime television show, Girl Talk, now in its fourth year. GT's creator-producer-director, Monty Morgan, says, "If Clare Boothe Luce ever should decide to write a sequel to her famous play, 'The Women,' all she'd have to do is hang around here. She would come up with all the feminine cattiness she could ever need."

From my own experience, I'd have to say that Morgan is undoubtedly right. Once, for example, Selma Diamond, the brilliant comedy writer with a voice like a Brooklyn-born lioness, stood waiting backstage to tape a segment. In the meantime, she was watching on a monitor the taping of another Girl Talk which featured Joan Crawford as one of the guests. Selma eagerly studied the ex-movie queen and then she turned to Monty Morgan and said, "After that show is over, you must introduce me to Joan Crawford. It'll be just like meeting Spencer Tracy."

Another time when I was waiting my turn, I overheard a blistering exchange which took place between writer Cindy Adams and Mrs. Earl Wilson, wife of the syndicated columnist. Mrs. Adams had been holding forth for quite some time, discussing her various exploits, trips, famous people she had met and anything else she had ever done. Continuing her exercise in "I-isms" she said, "And I was in this fabulous restaurant . . ." Before she had a chance to finish the sentence, Mrs. Wilson asked, "As a waitress?"

Totie Fields pushed her bulk upstairs to the makeup room, where her fellow guest, Jayne Mansfield, was receiving the finishing touches to her physiognomy. Cooed Miss Fields to Miss Mansfield, "Oh, I'm so glad I'm on the same show with you. People are constantly telling me how much alike you and I are." Totie giggled while Jayne burned.

From a meow to a hiss

Sometimes, what starts out as a backstage cat-fight erupts as a full-blown feud-to-the-death right on camera. For instance, one afternoon Zsa Zsa Gabor was waiting to go on and someone said to her, "I think it's just awful what Sheilah Graham said about you." "Vat did she say?" inquired the volatile Hungarian. "She said your recent marriage would last only as long as it took you to walk from Tiffany to Cartier," meowed Miss Gabor's informant.

Seething with rage, Zsa Zsa marched out and took her place in front of the camera. She completely disregarded Virginia Graham's futile attempts to restore her good humor and, instead, launched into an impassioned defense of the love affair then raging between Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton. She implied that columnist Sheilah Graham was too old and therefore could no longer sympathize with anyone in love. Then, just for good measure, she also included society columnist Suzy Knickerbocker in her attack. Miss Graham did not pick up the tossed gauntlet but Suzy did. On her appearance on the show, Suzy declared that "Zsa Zsa has an age complex and she has a right to one." She then delivered the coup de grâce by christening Zsa Zsa "Miss Chicken Paprika of 1910."

Often producer Morgan finds himself, in addition to his regular chores, the referee in a brawl, and he tries to keep the antagonists separated to avoid further mishap. One afternoon before a show, he heard Ruth Berle, Milton Berle's wife, saying to Doris "How to Marry a Millionaire" Lilly, "Why is it that all single women consider themselves such authorities on men?" Monty could see Miss Lilly girding herself for a claws-bared retort so he hurried her over to introduce her to a lovely young thing who happened to be near-by.

Quickly he said, "I'm sure you two remember each other." And Miss Lilly, whose black mood had already been set by Ruth Berle, replied, "Of course I remember her. I always remember women who go out with the husbands of my best friends."

Since the show is for and about women, clothing becomes a very important factor. Also, since the program is seen during the daytime, Monty Morgan sends a letter to each up-coming guest diplomatically suggesting that appropriate street clothes be worn.

No job for a man

One afternoon before a show I was to do, Eve Nelson, a vice president of E. J. Korvette, Inc., arrived, neat and trim in a handsome, lightweight wool suit. Shortly thereafter, actress Mamie Van Doren showed up clad in something which could only be described as a short nightgown. Both Eve and Mamie were to be on the same show. We had been talking backstage, before Miss Van Doren's arrival, about interchangeable jobs for men and women. A man could be a nurse, and so on. Miss Nelson took one look at Mamie and said, "Boy, I'd like to see some guy doing her job."

Then, one afternoon, the charmingly amusing actress Hermione Gingold, swinging a beautifully shod, pointed-toed foot, was having an off-camera conversation with a fashion co-ordinator who cattily said to Miss Gingold, "Pointed-toed shoes are ruining the feet of American women." Hermione gazed down at the sturdy loafer-type shoes the other woman was wearing. "Take off a shoe," Miss Gingold commanded. Proudly the woman took off her brogan and handed it to Hermione, who then held it up, sniffed disdainfully and said, "Fancy any man drinking champagne out of that!"

Monty Morgan's ladies do not drink champagne out of shoes, but some of them do drink. "We shoot at cocktail time," explains Morgan, "and all too often a guest artist gets here three sheets to the wind." Not long ago, I heard Virginia Graham ask Monty, "Does Miss X pass the sobriety test?" "Lord, no," murmured Morgan. "Her breath takes my beauty away."

Another time a British barmaid arrived. Not only was she tipsy, but she brought with her a huge tub of British beer which she cordially offered to share with us. "Bottles up!" she cried, as she sampled her own wares. If Monty or Virginia cannot sober their inebriated guests, Meredith Anderson, the show's pretty press agent, pinch-hits. So far, she has made five unscheduled appearances.

Element of surprise

Only once in over 715 prepared shows has Morgan been forced to cancel one entirely because of a backstage rumble. He had read a book about the rearing of twins written by a mother of same, and he decided to do a show using the author along with other ladies who had experienced multiple birth. He found a woman who had triplets, and an actress, also a mother of twins, who was in an off-Broadway show.

No participant in a Girl Talk show knows with whom she will appear, since Monty believes the show's popularity depends upon the spontaneity of the guests. In this case, the spontaneity erupted backstage into instantaneous combustion. The author of the book came out of the makeup room at the same time the off-Broadway actress swept into the theater. To Morgan's astonishment, the lady author screamed, "Get her out of here before I kill her!"

The actress reacted just as violently, hollering, "If there's to be any killing, I'm gonna be the murderer." Only then did Monty learn that both women were the ex-wives of the same husband. Singer Kay Armen and I were pressed into immediate service and went on a half hour earlier than we had expected.

No reason to be catty

After my show was over, I went into Virginia's dressing room while she changed her clothes for the next show. We chatted about the brouhaha between the two ex-wives. "That was so foolish," said Virginia. "After all, we were only going to talk about multiple births, not multiple marriages."

"You will notice," said Virginia, "that the bigger the woman, the less mean or catty she is about other women. We've had some of the biggest on this show. Joan Crawford, Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Joan Fontaine, Gloria Swanson, Agnes Moorehead—and I could name 500 others."

"You're absolutely right," I said. "Why should a woman be catty about another—even if she is younger or prettier or more successful than we are?"

Just then, another young, pretty and successful guest poked her head into Virginia's dressing room to say hello. When she left, Virginia said to me, "Isn't that a gorgeous new wig she's wearing?"

"Hmmm," I snarled. "That broad doesn't need a wig; she needs a mask."

SOLOIST WHO'S EAGER TO HARMONIZE

John Davidson needs the assurance of being a welcome member of every group

BY ROBERT HIGGINS

He's 24 and has a perfect Pepsi Generation face and a nervous, bouncy gait. He's a singer, and a good one. Critics respect him (Time tagged him "the most promising, fastest-rising graduate of the rock-'n'-roll generation") and fellow show folk adore him (Carol Burnett thinks he's "the greatest thing to come through a tube since tooth paste").

He's John Davidson, star of the Kraft Summer Music Hall.

If you caught CBS's The Entertainers last year you may remember Davidson. That's when he was being hailed as the Wonder Boy who got the show with little more than the proverbial pocketful-of-dreams to his theatrical credit. Which was almost true. He'd had the juvenile lead in a musical ("Foxy"), and—while in high school—made a few TV commercials.

Davidson's credits look better today. He has since starred in NBC's "The Fantasticks" special; played a rash of TV (The Hollywood Palace, Bell Telephone Hour) and club dates; sent Broadway into a tizzy playing Curly in a revival of "Oklahoma!"; is one of the stars in a new Disney picture ("The Happiest Millionaire"); and has now stepped into the spacious loafers of Andy Williams and Perry Como for the summer.

Davidson, while not exactly having it made, certainly is flying. He knows it, too—and being shoved into the spotlight scares him stiff. "There's a big chunk of me," he says in the shaky voice of a school kid on the carpet, "that no one knows about. I'm in hiding most of the time. When I get up in front of an audience, I feel like it's only part of me out there—like I'm some sort of liar."

Audiences apparently haven't minded so far. Davidson can, as one "Oklahoma!" singer put it, "make a theater audience sound like Sinatra was back at the Paramount." What's more, his income was something around $50,000 last year. Not bad for a guy who, in college three years ago, had trouble getting up beer money. As Bob Banner, Davidson's discoverer and the Kraft show's executive producer, understates it, "You can't say John has done badly."

No you can't. Davidson knows that too, and that's not really what scares him. "I'm running away from myself," he admits, "from exposing my feelings—which is torturous for me. It's so hard for me to get up and say what I want. There are times when I just want to run away—hide from it all."

It's an intriguing statement, especially coming from a young man who has been described in the press as "all-American," "wholesome," "clean-cut" and about as complicated—and interesting—as a plate of pabulum. There's more to Davidson than that. He is, in fact, a young man running scared.

He was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., the son of a Baptist minister. "A minister," Davidson explains, "has to live up to a certain image. That means hiding his feelings." As a kid, Davidson remembers, he was taught "not to let people know what you feel." "If you have a headache," he goes on, "don't tell people about the pain. If you're angry, don't let it show. It's like bringing kids up to be vegetables."

Anyway, as a child Davidson bottled up almost everything he felt. In college (Denison, in Ohio), too. Mary Louise Wood, a college chum, recalls: "John was not an open person. He seemed frightened to expose himself—to be laid bare emotionally." Little wonder, John concedes, that he developed into the "nice, placid, all-American boy" most people consider him to be: "That tag," he says, "infuriates me. It makes me feel continued impotent, ineffectual." Only he's afraid to shake it. "I'm terrified," he explains, "that people won't like me if I do. That's why I hang on to it—to be liked."

Being liked is crucial to Davidson. And it frightens him to think that he's not. "Let anyone say something critical to me," he says, "and it destroys me. The butcher, the elevator operator—anyone." It's because, as Davidson puts it, he's been taught that people should accept—and like—each other unquestioningly. "That's why," he goes on, "I can't get up and say, 'Look, this is what I want' or 'I don't like this or that about you.' I usually do what people tell me, do it their way. But I'm getting to be important enough now that I have to make demands. Only it scares me to death."

His ambition frightens him

His ambition scares him, too. He has a good, healthy dose of it, but it's not easy to detect. "That would mean I'm too self-centered, which is a sickness," he says. "I'm scared," he continues, "that people will find out that I'm only interested in things that affect me." Which is just about the way Davidson feels. He believes politics doesn't affect him personally and has no interest in it ("I vote because it's the 'accepted' thing to do"); he doesn't give a hoot about the theater ("I'm interested in my being in the theater, not the theater itself"); and, somewhat incredibly, is almost totally unaware of what's going on in the world ("Up until a year ago I never read a newspaper").

Davidson is totally involved in his career. It shouldn't bother him one way or the other but, he says: "I'm afraid if people discover I worked professionally before The Entertainers, it'll take some of the shine off my 'Wonder Boy' image." There's something else Davidson worries about. "I never thought much about death before," he says, "about doing what you love and then—suddenly—nothing. I think about guys my age being killed in Vietnam. In a second—bang—and that's it. It keeps me awake nights." Davidson sleeps only a little better now despite the fact he has been given a draft deferment because of a swelling of the joints.

Davidson's devotion to his career has, in many ways, been a lifesaver. As Miss Wood observes: "It keeps John working hard, and that makes him happy." He is seemingly not too happy socially. "I have a few friends," Davidson says, "but seldom see them. I've had roommates. But after a while, I can't stand having them around. Girls, too. I date one girl at a time. But I'm not ready to settle down with one girl. And it scares me when a girl gets serious. They don't know," he says, "how painful—physically painful, it is for me to reveal myself. I run, try to hide. It makes for a terrible loneliness at times."

It must. Ironically, Davidson—the romantic, young idol of countless women—finds he's most at home (and this is somewhat frightening) with a monkey. "I love monkeys because they're totally dependent on me," he says, displaying the first, if only faint, glimmer of emotion. "They ask nothing in return. It's guaranteed acceptance." Davidson's last monkey, Bosco, died in his arms, and he recalls: "I cried for half an hour. I felt I had killed the only creature in the world who wanted to be with me." Davidson knows that until he stops running scared and faces himself, people, as he puts it, "will never know how much I have to offer." Until then, he concludes, one of his greatest joys is reading a book on monkeys. Says he: "Just one chapter, 'The Care and Management of Monkeys.' I want to make sure I don't lose another friend."

FOR THE RECORD

Northern California Edition

Night Fliers: Johnny Carson and his NBC Tonight show may be getting some new competition. Both ABC and CBS are thinking seriously about launching late-night shows in the fall of 1967, perhaps earlier, which would solve an aggravating problem for their affiliated stations. The stations are finding it more and more difficult to buy movies: the supply is dwindling, and the networks, which in September will have five prime-time movies a week, are gobbling up the best available newer films.

CBS polled its affiliates, and 80 percent of them said they would welcome a network entertainment show to run five nights a week, after the late-evening news. ABC, which tried this sort of thing once before—with Les Crane as the star of what turned out to be strictly a fly-by-night series—is game to take another crack at it. At the moment Joey Bishop, who has had plenty of on-the-job training filling in for Johnny Carson, is the leading candidate for the ABC berth.

Quite a Day: A wedding and two frightening accidents made July 19 an eventful day for several prominent members of Hollywood's entertainment community. The happy couple were Frank Sinatra and his bride from Peyton Place, Mia Farrow. Sinatra, 50, and Miss Farrow, 21, who just a few days earlier had announced plans for a November wedding, pushed the date up and were married in a brief Las Vegas ceremony attended by a few friends.

Among the wedding spectators was Red Skelton, whose wife had been the victim of an accident early that morning. While Skelton was completing the midnight show of his Las Vegas nightclub act, a .38-caliber pistol which the Skeltons kept on a night table in their hotel room was fired by Georgia Skelton when she reached for something on the table. A bullet hit her in the chest. The wound was not considered serious, but she was hospitalized.

Meanwhile, off the coast of Monterey, Cal., Jerry Lewis's $350,000, 65-foot yacht, Pussycat, crashed into some rocks and eventually sank. Lewis and four other passengers abandoned ship and headed for shore in a life raft. The raft capsized about 30 yards from land, and they swam the rest of the way.

Vietnam Casualty: Ron Nessen, the NBC newsman who was wounded in Vietnam, is reported in "good" condition after undergoing surgery. Nessen was hit in the chest by shrapnel.

Taylor for Reagan: Now that Ronald Reagan is starring in the California gubernatorial campaign, he has permanently relinquished his role as host of Death Valley Days. Last week the sponsor of the long-running syndicated series picked another veteran movie and TV actor to replace Reagan. He's Robert Taylor, who will take over as host when Death Valley Days begins its 15th season this fall.

KIND WORDS FOR A WRITER

Alan Ebert showed his tremendous love for Sammy Davis Jr. not only in the kind things he had to say about him, but also in his criticism ["What Do You Hear, Baby?" July 9 and 16]. Parts of the story brought tears to my eyes because of the honesty with which it was written.

Harriet Wasser
Bronx, N.Y.

I have just finished reading the second part of the Sammy Davis story by Alan Ebert and he should be commended on the most touching and sincere article I have read in quite a while.

Mrs. R. M. Nicol
Little Falls, N.J.

May I express my admiration of Alan Ebert's two-part story . . . most especially for bringing out the human qualities of the great performer. The absolute honesty of Mr. Ebert's observations can do nothing but enhance the public's respect for Mr. Davis the performer, and the man.

Joan W. Wagner
Wurtsmith AFB, Mich.

AND SOME NOT SO KIND

TV GUIDE had an article about

Sammy Davis Jr. that made a lasting impression—one of total dislike of Mr. Alan Ebert. What could compel a writer to show such obvious contempt and jealousy?

Susie Lamberson
Wausau, Wis.

WITH A HOWL, A HOO AND A HAR, HAR

That article ["The Laff Box," July 2 and 9] on (hee, hee) canned laughter (ha, ha) was an absolute scream from beginning to end (titter). I mean that part (now get this) where that comedian delivers the line (get ready now), "People are so conditioned to the laugh track that if they don't hear it, they don't know it's a comedy show." (Howl, hoo, har, har, hardy har, har, har.) Keep your eye on that comedian, he's really on his way. What makes his line so funny (ha, ha) is that I can remember those old comedies in the movie houses (remember those joints), like Charlie Chaplin, Buster Keaton, W. C. Fields and Mack Sennett (ho, ho, ho), that didn't even have a sound track and I used to go wild! (Dead silence!)

Michael Koskinen
North Bergen, N.J.

WRONG PEW

Thank you for your article about John Gary, once an Episcopal choirboy ["Former Choirboy Who Sings a Different Tune These Days," July 9], but you might have put an Episcopal hymnal into his hands!

Rev. Edmond T. P. Mullen
Brooklyn, Conn.

Mr. Gary was holding a Catholic hymnal. Our picture editor has been admonished.—Ed.

Four isn't too early...

to discover the fun of BOOKS THEY

Four isn't too early for BEGINNER BOOKS. They're perfect for reading aloud to pre-schoolers who become even more eager to start reading on their own. At five, six and seven, these wonderful books help children actually make the exciting discovery of "I can read it myself!" Eight isn't too late. That's when reading problems can arise and create other tensions about school. BEGINNER BOOKS are so easy to read, they restore the relaxed attitude and confidence that are so important to progress.

To appreciate the value of BEGINNER BOOKS, enroll your youngster for a trial period in the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM. Start now, and you'll receive for your child the three books shown here for $1.49.

Books of Adventure, Humor, Knowledge—Written in Words He Already Knows or Can Quickly Learn

The importance of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM goes far beyond the glorious illustrations and fascinating stories. Each book makes reading more fun and easier than ever, because it is written in simple, basic words your child has already learned or can quickly pick up. All are written and illustrated by gifted writers and artists who know where a child's heart is. The stories tell about such wonders as dogs who can ski, a polka-dot animal who wants to get into a zoo, and a bird who thinks an airplane is his mother.

As a child makes friends with these lovable creatures he'll read about their hilarious adventures again and again—growing fonder of the books with each reading, and fonder of reading with each book. The romance will last, too. For the youngster who learns during his early, formative years that reading is a pleasure, becomes a reader for life!

BEGINNER BOOKS are durably designed to live with a small child. Printed in at least three bright colors and large readable type, they're just long enough for a child's attention span. As a member of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM, your child will receive a BEGINNER BOOK every month and you will be billed only $1.49 plus a small mailing charge, instead of the publisher's catalog price of $1.95. After four monthly selections, you may cancel any time.

Our Introductory Trial Offer

We invite you to prove the benefits of the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM by accepting the three books shown here—a $5.85 value at the publisher's catalog price—for $1.49. Even this small investment in your child's reading and school progress carries no risk. Ten days' trial must convince you the program will stimulate your child's appetite for reading, or you may return the three introductory books and owe nothing. If we prove our point, have you ever seen a greater bargain? Fill out and mail the postage-paid card today, to:

THE CAT IN THE HAT
 by Dr. Seuss

Mommy was out and there was nothing to do until the magical "Cat in the Hat" walked in to entertain Sally and her brother. Then—oh, what a mess! How the cat fixed it all up before Mommy got back makes a Dr. Seuss story your child will love!

THE KING, THE MICE AND THE CHEESE
 by Nancy and Eric Gurney

In this fine fantastic frolic, a king struggles to keep the mice of his kingdom from eating all of his favorite food. After a glorious chase, the king—and the reader—learn that sharing can solve even this problem.

I WISH THAT I HAD DUCK FEET
 by Theo. LeSieg

Illustrated by B. Tobey
 Here are the comical imaginary adventures of a small boy who grows duck feet (so he needn't wear shoes), a whale's spout (to keep cool in summer), and other highly improbable appendages—only to discover it's best to be yourself after all.

8:00 6 9 LOCAL ISSUE—Report

'BIRTH OF A UNION'

Cesar Chavez is a home-grown unionist reminiscent of labor leaders of the Thirties. He has broken a labor barrier once thought impregnable by organizing more than 9000 migrant farm workers who have held out for 10 months in a strike against California's grape growers.

In this report on the strike's progress, films show the daily confrontations of strikers, scabs and police at the giant DiGiorgio ranch in Delano, Cal., the biggest holdout among the growers. The strikers, faced with the problem of picketing huge areas, patrol the region in battered cars, using bullhorns to shout their message.

Among those interviewed about the strike are Chavez; Dolores Huerta, vice-president of the National Farm Workers Association; DiGiorgio personnel director Dick Myer; Capt. Al Espinosa of the Delano police force; mime Luis Valdez, director of Teatro Campesino, a touring company that raises funds for the strike; and several Delano clergymen.

Mel Wax of the San Francisco Chronicle is the narrator. Produced for N.E.T. by KQED-TV, San Francisco.

'THE GRAVEDIGGERS'

The late Dr. Hubert Marlow, a radar scientist, was a dedicated man: Before he died, he had even insisted that he be buried in a cemetery near the radar station where he worked.

The death of Marlow was a grave situation in more ways than one—now the station's equipment can no longer pick up anything in the area of the cemetery.

Steed and Emma decide to dig up the facts on Marlow on the chance that his work (or ghost) has fallen into the wrong hands—Marlow's greatest ambition was to perfect a device capable of jamming radar.

Malcolm Hulke wrote the script for this episode, a parody of movie-serial cliffhangers. Steed: Patrick Macnee. Emma: Diana Rigg. (60 min.)

 Bernard Shaw

SPECIAL George Bernard Shaw was past 50 ("old enough to know better," he said) when he fell in love with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, a leading lady of the English stage. Jerome Kilty's "comedy of letters," produced on Broadway in 1960, is based on the famous couple's voluminous, if fitful, 40-year correspondence.

In this adaptation, Kilty is Shaw and his wife Cavada Humphrey is Mrs. Pat. They read the letters as if they were conversing vis-à-vis. Neither player attempts to impersonate the character—only to show what the letters reveal about this proud and witty pair. The artists' pride, grudging respect and harsh encouragements are clearly shown, but as for whether their love affair was purely Platonic, the play gives only provocative hints.

In Norfolk, Neb.,

THEY REMEMBER JOHNNY

... who was ad-libbing at the age of 6 (or maybe it was 7)

BY MAURICE CONDON

If Johnny Carson ever seeks the analyst's couch, it's hardly likely that he could dredge up a boyhood marred by frustration and unhap- continued

piness. In this respect he is certainly unlike his fellow comics—most of whom can recall early years of misery.

The small town of Norfolk, Neb., where Carson spent his huckleberry years, fulfills every specification for an ideal adolescence. Near-by flows the Elkhorn River, delightfully shivering-cold for a naked boy even in midsummer, and alive with fish. The horizon lies many miles from every view; the fertile earth yields corn of impossible height; and beef cattle are sleek and fat. Everywhere is abundance and prosperity.

To the insomniac millions who view him on The Tonight Show, he may be Johnny Carson, but here in Norfolk he is plain John Carson.

"John Carson was a good student," says Miss Jennie Walker, math teacher at Norfolk High. "One day I presented a problem in geometry using a baseball diamond as the geometrical form. I called on John to solve it. 'Miss Walker,' he said, 'how can I solve the problem when I don't know what teams are playing?'"

It was an early and therefore not too hilarious Carson ad-lib, but it may have been the forerunner of the lightning quips which have established him in the front rank of stand-up comedians.

"John always had a fast and funny answer," says Charles E. "Chuck" Howser, one of his high school buddies and therefore considerably prejudiced. "I wasn't there but I've heard tell that when he was just a tot, some 6 or 7 years old, his dad took him to the county fair and they came upon a demonstration of the proper way to milk a cow. As the demonstrator pulled up the three-legged stool, leaned against the cow's flank and took the udder in hand, the cow turned her head in gentle surprise and said, 'Gee, you've got cold hands!' It was John, of course, exercising his newly acquired power of ventriloquism."

At 6? "More likely he was 7."

Perhaps. What of Carson the student?

"He went out for the football team weighing 125 pounds. After a few scrimmages the coach took him aside and counseled something less vigorous. So John got active in everything else, including the scrap-metal drive. Remember, this was 1943.

"John was resolved that Norfolk High would lead the state in the collection of scrap. Under his direction, scavenging gangs were formed and we ranged far and wide. We did well.

"But one night, John couldn't collect a crew. So he went out alone and in the morning, there in the parking lot of Norfolk High, was a big hay rake. You know how big a hay rake is?"

Obviously, bigger than a bread box.

Young John as 'The Great Carsoni.'

"Considerably. It takes a tractor to move it. Now, how John got that thing to the school parking lot no one knows and he never did tell; but later that day a very mad farmer showed up and hauled it away."

The Carson family lived at 306 South 13th St. It is a gracious street, arched over with trees, leaf-shaded from the brilliant Nebraska sun.

The house has changed hands several times since the Carsons left town. The present occupants are Russell and Bjorg Caauwe and their children, Kristin, Theresa, Dennis and Jennifer Lee.

"This is where Johnny buried his 'time capsule,'" said Kristin, 11. "Here, alongside the garage. He found it and there was a silver dollar in it. We saw it on television."

"I sleep in Johnny Carson's bedroom!" exulted Theresa, 9. "I sent him a letter the other day telling him that I sleep in his old bedroom and would he send me an autographed photograph to hang over my bed. Will he send it, do you think?"

He will.

At Norfolk High the student annual is "The Milestone." In 1943, his year of graduation, John was the class historian and, reviewing the year, he wrote: "If you like this account, tell my friends. (My friends include my mother and others who have asked that their names be withheld.)"

Of September he wrote: "Football season opened this month and I went out to make the team. I would have, too, if they hadn't found where I hid my brass knuckles. . . . November was the month of blackouts, which the students enjoyed very much. . . . December ended with Bob Jesson waiting at his fireplace for Santa Claus and bag. Bob was interested in the bag, I believe. . . . January ended with the students drooling icicles on the way to school."

After graduation, Johnny enlisted in the Navy, was commissioned an ensign and, after service in the South Pacific, enrolled at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

Bill Wiseman Jr., now radio and television director of Mutual of Omaha, remembers college classmate Carson as an astute businessman:

"Gasoline was still rationed, so Johnny rallied us to build up a good business. We pooled our gas-ration stamps and we supplemented our supply through various devious means—don't ask how—and we sold gas in beer bottles at 50 cents. Obviously, a fellow couldn't get very far on a beer bottle of gas, but at least he had some measure of mobility, and it took him and his girl to a quiet parking place.

"Then our stamps ran out and our other sources dried up, but Johnny got an inspiration. He had a jalopy that had finally collapsed and he didn't have the money to buy parts to repair it, so we all towed the car back to Phi Gam house where, of an evening, it was very dark, very quiet. Johnny rented out the car as a necking parlor for 25 cents an hour and did a rushing business. Privacy was guaranteed."

That skinny kid

Bill Wiseman Sr., recently retired assistant general manager of radio and TV station WOW, Omaha, remembers the skinny kid who signed "John Carson" to his application form.

"It was 1949," said Bill. "Johnny was just out of the University and a classmate of my son, Bill Jr. He took the announcers' audition and was hired at $50 a week.

"We first got a hint that Johnny was not exactly a conformist when the station auditor sent him a memo that he owed the company 20 cents for a long distance call to Council Bluffs. That's right across the river, you know, but still long distance.

"Johnny didn't respond to the memo. Why, I don't know. So, after a while the auditor sent him another memo pointing out that the call was not an authorized business call and must be construed as personal. Please stop by with 20 cents.

"Johnny didn't. And so it went on, for months, I guess. The auditor was stubborn and Johnny—well, I don't know whether he was stubborn or just having fun. Finally, the auditor got tough. You know, pay—or else!

Costly joke

"The next afternoon an armored car pulled up in front of the station. Two uniformed guards with drawn revolvers got out and stalked into the station with an envelope that could be surrendered only to the auditor, who came a-running! He signed, opened the envelope and found a check in the amount of 20 cents, signed by John Carson!

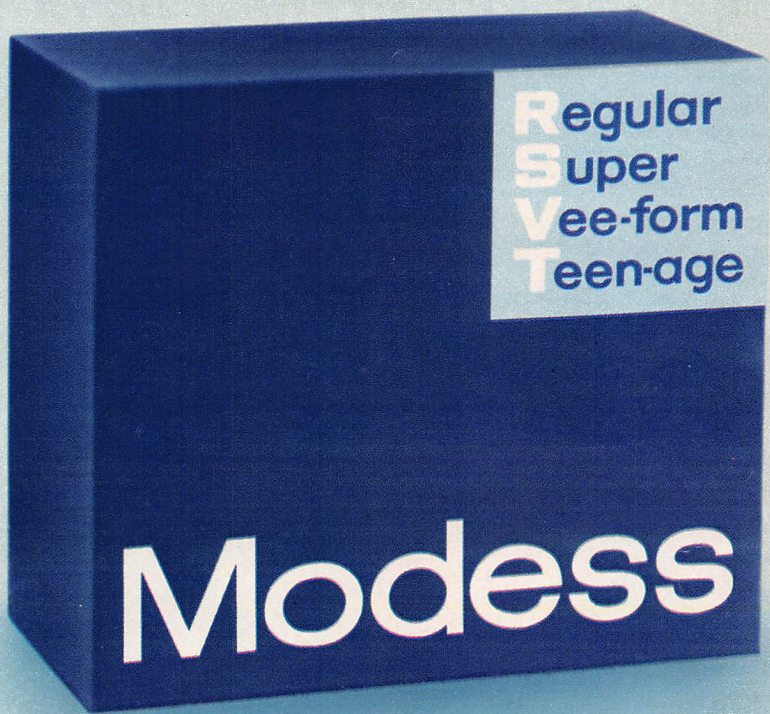

"Later I learned that it had cost Johnny $25 to rent the armored car and guards."

On one of the Tonight shows Johnny Carson opined that the best hamburgers he remembered were to be found in the Hamburger Hut in Norfolk, Neb. The present owner of the Hut, Mrs. Mary McMillen, bought the Hut only four years ago so she did not meet Johnny. But the former owner, Mrs. Marie Laubsch, who is now retired, remembers him well.

"Skinny as a rail," she recalls, "but a good eater. Hollow legs, I guess. But a well-mannered boy.

"Next year is Nebraska's Centennial. You tell John to come home and help us celebrate. I know he gets a lot of real fancy food in that New York but I see him on TV and he's still too skinny.

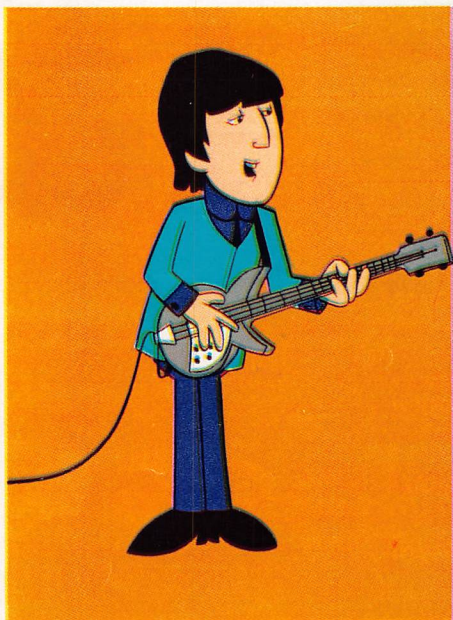

"You tell John to come home and I'll come out of retirement and fatten him up with some of those good Norfolk hamburgers!"

DRAWING A BEAD ON

John, especially when delivering important lines, really looks the leader. . . . He moves with fast, jerky, almost aggressive movements. . . . When facing front, he uses a sly, sideways look to talk to somebody. . . . Gestures: Pulls funny faces, especially after giving orders, which he immediately wipes off. . . . John never sits—he slouches.

George is very loose-limbed and angular. . . . He never stands. He is always leaning against something. . . . Head always tilted forward. . . . Mouth always lopsided. . . . George always gives the impression of frowning. This is because his eyebrows thicken as they reach his nose. . . . He never looks at whom he is talking to.

THE BEATLES

The quest for authenticity has driven the masterminds of The Beatles, an ABC Saturday morning cartoon series, to sit gamely through repeated showings of movies starring the real Beatles, to study the physical characteristics and mannerisms of the foursome. The findings of these amateur anthropologists are set forth, in detail, in guide lines for the show's animators. Here are some excerpts.

Paul is the most poised and stylish Beatle. . . . When he is in the background, he stands with his feet together and arms folded. . . . When he talks, he uses his hands, with fingers spread, to express what he's saying. . . . He tends to put his hand to his mouth when he is excited. . . . He doesn't really walk—he skips.

Ringo is the nice, gentle Beatle. He always looks rather sad. . . . When he stands, he always droops forward. His clothes tend to look as though they are a bit too big. . . . Ringo always looks a bit disjointed whether walking or standing. . . . Keep hair at back long and shaggy. Keep Ringo's neck thin to help the disjointed look.

How the broadcasting industry has set up a 'skills bank' to find and train men and women to fill responsible positions

BY EDITH EFRON

Writes an Ohio broadcaster: "We have made a considerable effort to solve the problem. I need not tell you of the difficulties we have encountered."

Writes a Washington, D.C., broadcaster: "We have made very sincere efforts to solve this very perplexing problem."

Writes a St. Louis broadcaster: "We are in complete agreement with your efforts to solve the problem."

These broadcasters' comments are typical of hundreds that have been received by a year-old organization called the Broadcast Skills Bank, which is dedicated to integrating Negroes into broadcasting.

One might suppose that "the problem" is that of finding jobs for Negroes. But this is not so. It is finding Negroes for the jobs. The broadcasting industry, in fact, is very much in the position of the nonplused host who has prepared a lavish banquet for guests who refuse to show up for the party.

It's not that there are no Negroes employed in radio and TV today. There are—both on and off screen. In addition to on-screen performers seen regularly by the viewers, there are Negro sound technicians, cameramen, directors, producers, news reporters, stage managers, continuity-acceptance workers, scenic designers, traffic managers, publicists, time salesmen, staff engineers, film handlers, video- and audio-recording technicians, projectionists, etc. But, comparatively speaking, the Negroes in broadcasting are so few that one could probably compile a nation-wide list of them without too much difficulty.

The Broadcast Skills Bank was founded to counteract this rarity. A branch of the National Urban League, the "Bank" was established by the League in cooperation with CBS, NBC, ABC and the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company. It provides for an inventory of qualified Negroes, interested in entering the broadcasting industry; it assists in obtaining part-time employment for high school graduates who are continuing with their studies; and it encourages training programs and scholarships for university students. In essence, it functions as a "clearinghouse" for Negro manpower and is organized to channel this manpower into networks, broadcasting chains, individual stations and allied crafts and guilds.

As Donald H. McGannon, president of Westinghouse Broadcasting, and chairman of the Broadcasters' Committee of the "Bank," explains its genesis: "The broadcaster's responsibility to his community and to himself in these days of rapid change dictates an affirmatively aggressive role in the national effort to employ minority manpower."

And broadcasters have been "affirmatively aggressive." According to

George Norford, now of Westinghouse, who was, when at NBC, the first Negro to achieve executive status at a network: "The broadcaster has taken the initiative. This is one of the first programs of its kind to be developed by any industry. It is supported by the major elements of the industry."

Mr. McGannon similarly reports, "We're getting excellent cooperation from the broadcasters. I'm very impressed and pleased with it. Every day I get a dozen letters from all over the country, very enthusiastic, promising cooperation. At this point, we have a nation-wide framework organized.

"A lot of recruiting and training programs already exist within the industry. The networks in particular are doing very aggressive work in this field. But the bulk of the stations are small local operations employing under a hundred people. These stations have been limited in whom they can hire. Often there are no training programs available locally. The usual problem is that the time you stumble across a qualified Negro is not the time you have a vacancy. Then there's a vacancy—but there's no qualified Negro. That's why people are enthusiastic about an industry-wide approach. It permits job placement within the industry as a whole."

But if broadcasters, big, medium and little, are responding to this leadership, the Negroes are not. According to Mr. Norford, who devotes his principal energies to the furthering of this project, "People are not registering or applying. There is a real problem here. It's not only that the qualified Negroes aren't applying—they're not applying for the training programs either." It is an ironic fact that while Negro leaders have been denouncing the broadcasting industry for maintaining the color bar, jobs for Negroes within this industry have gone begging, from Coast-to-Coast. About 15 people a continued month have applied to the Skills Bank, over the last year, for information or guidance. Mr. Norford has no record of actual job placements.

The problem of the absent beneficiary is by no means peculiar to the broadcasting industry. "Other industries are having the exact problem we're having in looking for qualified people," reports Mr. McGannon.

Why is this? Different explanations are offered. "I believe," says Mr. McGannon, "that it's a kind of cynicism. The Negroes have faced a long period of disappointment. I think many of them believe this is window dressing, showcasing. I think that the Negro community may well be expected to have a critical attitude. The solution of the problem will be in the doing. Where there's a sincerity of purpose, they will discover it. But I think it's going to take time to crack."

Mr. Norford calls it a "psychological block." "There's timidity and hesitation on the part of the Negroes. They've not been particularly welcome. They've not been encouraged to apply for jobs no matter how qualified. They're skeptical about the honesty and sincerity of these programs. Also, they've been trained to work and to seek their careers within the Negro world. But this is the big white world: They don't want to step into it."

The most fundamental reason given, however, is that most Negroes—even, in many cases, graduates of Negro colleges—are still unqualified for work in a complex industry. The situation seems largely unchanged since a Negro journalist, Louis Lomax, charged in 1963 that lack of training, not discrimination, was depriving Negro youths of job opportunities.

In a controversial article in a national magazine, entitled "Young Negroes Aren't Ready," Lomax wrote:

"Young Negroes are not qualified for the new jobs in industry and government now open to them. . . . Apartheid and inequality involve more than the broad denial of opportunities and freedoms. They prescribe the inferior standards exacted of us by white people, and they serve as excuses as we Negroes fail to demand higher standards of ourselves. Thus our students, on the whole, are unready for competition in the general American market place."

A former official of the Urban League, Otis Finley Jr., has also commented: "Our job now is to help our students leapfrog over generations of neglect and frustration into the age of astronauts, automation, cybernetics and mass-communication."

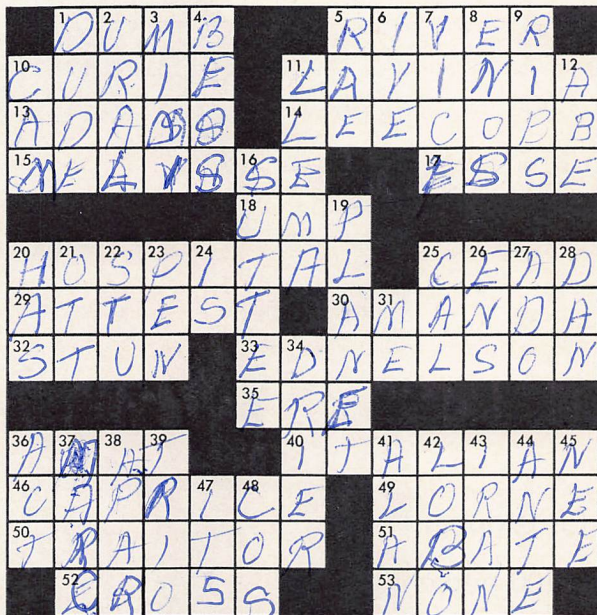

As the broadcasters are now discovering, this cultural "leapfrogging" has not yet been accomplished. "Essentially," says McGannon, "a very limited number of people are ready. The great bulk of Negroes are insufficiently educated. But there's a tremendous social movement in progress. It's going to help these people with training and education. We're taking the long-range view of things. The Broadcast Skills Bank is addressing itself to what is going to be happening in the next 20 years."

This is a somewhat anticlimactic outlook for an "aggressively affirmative" project. But the anticlimax applies primarily to mass employment. It does not apply to the constant, if numerically small, flow of talented and able Negroes who are moving into the broadcasting industry on their own steam. As one of these, George Broderick, a composer who is writing music for commercials, comments: "The Negroes you now see in the industry are actually pioneers. They're the trail blazers who are not afraid to compete in the white world. They're opening up the paths that the others will eventually follow."

Answer to last week's puzzle

Christopher West is 100 percent girl and 200 percent expert on

How not to get a TV role

There was a little girl who had a little curl, right in the middle of her forehead. When she was good she was very, very good and when she was bad she was like—wow!

During the pilot-casting season each year Christopher (her real name) West goes out on four or five interviews a week. "My agent sets up the dates and phones me what are supposed to be sure-fire tips like 'Be perky, cute and sexy' or 'Look witty' or 'Think sinister.' Once I was advised to bounce in there like 'a real fun gal.'

Well, that covers a lot of possibilities."

Talk about cheek! During last season's run-around, her agent sent her out to Universal for a casting interview with this advice: "Look all-American, wholesome and uncomplicated." She showed up all rosy-cheeked and in a pink suit, only to find the producer skittering about from stage to cutting room to projection room, darting in to give her a minute here, two minutes there. The next day Miss West shipped him a skateboard with this note attached:

"Knowing how busy you are, I thought you might want something to ride to the set."

She didn't get the part.

She was even cheekier at Metro, where she was supposed to be a "grieving sexy type." As she tells it: "The casting director looked like a Smith College professor with his olive-drab blazer and his desert boots. When I went in he didn't get up or ask me to sit down. He was chomping away on sandwiches and pickles all the time I was there. So I started in telling him about myself. He just swallowed and said, 'Look, sweetie, we're going to decide from pictures. Send me some pictures.' So the next day I fixed up a box lunch and I wrapped one of my still photos around each sandwich. I plunked the box on his desk and said, 'I believe this is what you wanted.'"

She didn't get the part.

Then there's the time recently when

Christopher was called in to read for a pilot at 20th. The producer was obviously leaning toward Meredith MacRae for the part, since the interview was continually interrupted by secretaries and assistants bursting in to report: "So-and-so won't be able to pick up Meredith at the airport." After each interruption the producer asked Christopher to start all over again: "Stand up, sweetie, and walk around. Tell me about yourself." Finally Christopher announced: "Listen, I don't have anything better to do. Why don't I pick up Meredith?"

No, she didn't get the part.

But when she was good she landed one-shots on upwards of a dozen series including Dr. Kildare and The Red Skelton Hour.

Christopher's dad, Judge Franklin West, was cheeky too. He achieved some television notoriety of his own in the early days of the medium when, as Superior Court judge in Orange County, Cal., he issued a prece-dential ruling banning TV cameras from the courtroom during the sensational murder trial of 18-year-old heiress Beulah Louise Overell, accused of dynamiting the family yacht with her parents aboard.

From Santa Ana, her home town, Christopher went to New York to study at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, before returning to the West Coast to make the rounds. At 5-feet-6 she is considered tall in the casting offices. "I have résumés with three different heights: 5-feet-5, 5-feet-5¼ and 5-feet-5½. If they ask the question, 'Is that with or without heels?' it always means I'm too tall for the leading man. So on-screen I wind up seated, with the male principals standing."

Q. If you're a pussycat on your way up, should you spit, scratch and claw, or should you be demure?

A. If, like Christopher West, your measurements are 38-22-35, does it matter all that much?

Christopher West in one role she did get—on The Red Skelton Hour.

Get your family a State Farm Money Tree life insurance plan from State Farm is like having your own money tree. It grows as your needs grow, blooms with cash you can use anytime during your life. It spreads protective branches over you and your family. It lives on even if you're not there, yielding income and security for your family. And unlike savings or investment, a money tree gives you an immediate estate, as big as you want, right from the start. There's one State Farm money tree with a special branch to shelter each member of your family. Typically, it provides $10,000 life insurance for you, $2,000 for your wife (more if she's younger than you, less if older), and $2,000 for each child. One policy and one payment covers all of you. And at 2 weeks of age, new additions to the family are automatically protected for $2,000 at no increase in cost. On top of that, it pays double for you and your wife in case of accidental death. Plant your State Farm money tree now, when it costs you least. Call the family insurance man who probably saves you money on car insurance, your nearby State Farm agent.
